

Director's Note

Evening Program changes

Please note the following changes to February evening programming at the Library:  Pamela Druckerman will be speaking about her new book, French Children Don't Throw Food, on Wednesday 22 February – two weeks later than originally scheduled. The book by the author of Lust in Translation (and a former Library book group leader) has been greeted with extraordinary acclaim in the United Kingdom and the United States.

Donald Morrison, the American author of Comment Obama a perdu l'Amerique, has been added to the schedule for Wednesday 8 February. Morrison, a former Time magazine writer and editor, is also the author of The Death of French Culture. He will discuss the Obama presidency and the stakes in the U.S. presidential election.

This week at the Library, don't miss Paris author Jeffrey Greene in a special WICE Writers on Writing program Tuesday evening, and novelist Fernanda Eberstadt on Wednesday evening. Booklist calls her "a novelist of exhilarating wit, incandescent metaphors, moral curiosity, and deep-sea psychology."

Saturday 4 February

Bookworms Book Club (ages 9-12)

Bookworms is back this month with

One Crazy Summer, by Rita Williams-Garcia. Join us as we discover this exciting, award-winning new book. We'll be meeting over three consecutive Saturdays starting Saturday 4 February from 12h00-13h00.

Black History Month began as Negro History Week, an initiative of Dr. Carter G. Woodson, founder of the Journal of Negro History in 1916 (copies of which the Library holds in its archives). Woodson launched Negro History Week to bring national attention to the contributions of black people to American history..

In the U.S., Black History Month, also referred to as African-American History Month, celebrates the contributions of African Americans throughout U.S. history. Outside of the U.S., Black History Month observances expand to include the history and impact of the African diaspora.

Join us in the Children's library for a special civil rights and Black History Month celebration for kids on Saturday 4 February. Then on Tuesday 7 February Monique Wells serves up an illustrated talk on the African Diaspora and Food, a common way to approach the issue of identity. This presentation is in conjunction with the Library's exhibit 'Following The Flavors of the African Diaspora' on view from Tue 7 February - Sun 4 March 2012.

Attention all expats

A scholar in Brussels has created a comprehensive survey for American expatriates in Europe in an effort to shed more light on what makes this diverse community tick. The survey takes 20-25 minutes to complete and is anonymous and confidential. The researcher, Amanda Klekowski, is a lecturer in politics and migration studies at the University of Kent in Brussels and may eventually present her findings to a Library audience. You're invited to learn more and if you'd like, take the survey.
