

Art and the art of acting at the Library

The 19th century French-Dutch impressionist Camille Pissarro, while heralded by so many for his rich, beautiful tableaux, nonetheless has not been a fixture in popular culture in the way that those he influenced have become - artists like Cezanne, Seurat, Van Gogh and Gauguin.

On 22 May, Ann Saul, a veritable Pissarro scholar, writer and art lecturer, will take us on a journey through the evocative paintings of this master, an evening that promises to be fascinating art lovers and those who simply love to see France depicted on canvas. Be sure to read Saul's essay about the chapter that got cut from her book on the Library blog.

On 28 May, French-American actor Jean-Marc Barr, best known from his landmark 1988 film The Big Blue and his ongoing collaboration with Danish cinematic provocateur Lars von Trier, will be at the Library to give us his take on being Jack Kerouac.

Barr stars as Beat Generation writer and poet Jack Kerouac in the upcoming film Big Sur, an adaptation of the author's 1962 novel about alcoholism and mental and physical descent in the wake of his popular success.

What are the burdens and responsibilities of portraying a cultural icon? How does an actor find the balance between a

Art on View: Homage to Daniel Buren by Serene Wise

Tuesday 21 May to Sunday 7 July

This exhibition presents paintings, maquettes and drawings by Serene Wise from her series, Homage to Daniel Buren, which began during the artist's 2011 residency at the Cité Internationale des Arts in Paris. Daniel Buren is famous for painting vertical bands or stripes always at 8.7 centimeters wide – the width of stripes used in commercial awning material in France – and always oriented at 90°, making them straight up and down.

With a sense of play, Wise began her homage to Buren with his 8.7 centimeter bands which, after much experimentation, she placed at 78°. She felt that this 78° angle worked well with the 8.7

centimeter bands. The numbers are a nice juxtaposition: 8.7 centimeters @ 78°.

You can hear the artist talk more about Daniel Buren and the inspirations behind her artwork when she speaks on Saturday 8 June at 14h00 at the Library.
